4. Had lunch with [REDACTED] who briefed me on his trip to Europe. Of greatest significance is the fact that he believes the Financial Property Accountability System is firmly launched. It is going particularly well in [REDACTED]. He thinks that [REDACTED] is a little slow, but says that he understands what is to be done. He also called my attention to the fact that the [REDACTED] which he found very hard to justify.

5. [REDACTED] who has been [REDACTED] with us, was in to say goodbye before returning to active duty with the Navy. He said that he had enjoyed his tour with us very much and felt that he had accomplished a great deal. I expressed my appreciation for his contribution and told him that I thought he should derive a great deal of self-satisfaction out of the fact that the people [REDACTED] had supported him so strongly and felt that he had really done a great job. He did not mention his misunderstanding about returning home early and I did not raise the subject. Whether he will leave as a disgruntled individual I don't know, but he seemed to be satisfied.
